
The Investigative Committee of Russia launches special project

The Investigative Committee of Russia is launching special project “On the Trail” dedicated to the work of the forensics service celebrating its 65th anniversary this year.

The job of a forensic investigator is associated with studying the patterns of originating criminal traces. It is widely known that any crime leaves a trace. The engagement of forensic investigators along with advanced technology to the crime scene examination provides for finding and documenting the smallest detail, sometimes not even recognized by a human eye. Further on, the analysis of such traces via genetic, ballistic, chemical and many other tests helps solve thousands of various crimes, including those committed years ago.

Watch the series about investigators and forensic experts following the trails of offenders on the Investigative Committee’s YouTube channel <https://youtu.be/f4x6TWaVOVc>. Experience the unique stories of our specialists from across Russia.
