
The investigative bodies of the Investigative Committee of Russia continue to deal with the resolution of issues of residents of Vsevolozhsky district of the Leningrad Region

The investigative bodies of the Investigative Committee of Russia continue to investigate the problems of concern to residents of Vsevolozhsky district of Leningrad region, in particular the residents of Rakhinsky rural settlement, to solution of whose problems the Chairman of the Investigative Committee of Russia Alexander Ivanovich Bastrykin previously paid attention during a working visit.

The Chairman of the Investigative Committee of Russia instructed the acting head of the Investigative Committee of Russia for the Leningrad region Mityaev D. Yu to report on the reception of residents of Rakhinsky rural settlement carried out the day before by officers of the department and the decisions made upon results of consideration of appeals.

More than 70 citizens outlined their concerns: some questions concerned the unsatisfactory state of roads, lack of gas and water supply. The citizens also spoke out about possible violations and illegal registration of land plots on the territory of the district, including on the shore of Lake Ladoga. Some local residents complained that access to the monument to the 101st Battery, which also happened to be surrounded by private land, is difficult. The Leningrad Regional Investigative Department of the Investigative Committee of Russia explained that inquiries into these matters are already in progress.

The Chairman of the Investigative Committee of Russia also instructed to keep the situation around the People's Museum "Road of Life" in Kokkorevo under control. The day before it was reported on the development of a new concept of the people's museum.

The next meeting of the Chairman of the Investigative Committee of the Russian Federation with local residents will take place in December of this year.
