
Chairman of Russian Investigative Committee orders to promptly finish the probe into violent crime committed against 16-year-old girl

The Chairman of the Investigative Committee of the Russian Federation, Alexander Bastrykin, has instructed the Main Investigative Department of the Russian Investigative Committee to conclude as soon as possible the investigation into a crime against the sexual inviolability of a 16-year-old girl.

Earlier, during an operational meeting in St Petersburg, the Head of Russia's Investigative Committee heard a report from his subordinates on the progress of the investigation. The report outlined the circumstances of the crime established during the preliminary investigation. At the moment, investigative measures in the criminal case have been completed and the accused are being acquainted with the materials of the case.
