hospitalization, officials said the child needed to be transported to the city of Achinsk, yet they didn't share information about this fact with the resuscitation and advisory center, nor did they arrange any transportation. Then, the minor diagnosed with acute intestinal infection, accompanied by a paramedic and her mother, was transported by an ambulance van without resuscitation equipment and without any medical assistance. During transportation on February 3, the minor was taken to a medical facility in Achinsk in a state of clinical death, where, after resuscitation, her death was attested.
