In Petrovsky Raion, shells hit important social facilities such as a hospital, a school, two kindergartens and more than 30 houses, where wounded people were reported. Seven people were injured during the shelling of the cities of Yasinovataya and Volnovakha, and the towns of Pokrovskoye and Melekino. The towns of Panteleymonovka and Georgievka near Donetsk were shelled by Grad missiles. There were attempts by Ukrainian nationalists to again use Tochka-U missiles with banned cluster munitions against the people of Melitopol, but the attack was repelled by Russian air defense.

In addition, Ukrainian servicemen fired several dozen large-caliber shells at the town of Frunze in the Lugansk People's Republic.

The investigation will have to give a legal assessment of these facts, as well as to identify all the persons involved in this shelling from among the Ukrainian nationalists in order to subsequently bring them to justice.
