Then he was taken to the Tchaikovskaya Central City Hospital by an ambulance. During surgery, doctors discovered a spontaneous rupture of the spleen of the patient, as a result of which he died. The parents informed the Head of the Investigative Committee of Russia that the criminal case was launched out of time. However, even now, according to the applicants, the investigation is conducted in an improper manner. They also disagree with the conclusions of the forensic medical examination, which did not establish a causal connection between the actions of doctors and the death of the patient. The applicants asked the Head of the Russian Investigative Committee to appoint an additional examination in a medical institution of St. Petersburg.

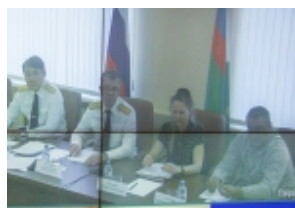

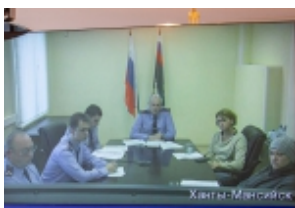

Mr. D.V. Golovkin, Head of the Investigative Directorate of the Investigative Committee of Russia for Perm krai, reported that a criminal investigation had been launched on the offense of a crime prescribed in Part 2, Article 109 of the Criminal Code of the Russian Federation (Infliction of Death
