their lives for freedom of the motherland. Those who stayed on the peninsula helped the front as much as they could. According to the archives, in 1943, a tank column "Kamchatka fisherman" was constructed on workers' personal savings and sent to the front. In the towns and villages of the peninsula, hundreds of people voluntarily donated hats, fur waistcoats, gloves, skins of deer, seals and other warm things at special centers.

Our people gained the victory due to great efforts. And it was forged not only on the battlefields but also deep in the hinterlands, such as Kamchatka.
