In Chechnya criminal case opened against deputy of rural settlement suspected of swindling with payouts

The investigating bodies of the Russia's Investigative Committee for the Chechen Republic have started a criminal case against a deputy of a rural settlement of Grozny municipal district over signs of a crime under part 4 of article 159 of the RF Penal Code (fraud with payouts).

According to investigators, the suspect in 2011, not being a Chernobyl nuclear power plant disaster fighter, turned false information in the administration of Grozny municipal district to be included in the federal program for a discount in buying residence. Based on the documents with false information in May 2013 the suspect received a state housing certificate for buying a residence worth 2 million 970 thousand rubles, under which the Russian Ministry of Construction transferred the money to this account. The deputy spent the said money to buy an estate.
