
Alexander Bastrykin sets off for Falcon-300 crash scene

Considering large public resonance of the Falcon-300 crash at Vnukovo killing head of a world's oil giant Christophe de Margerie and three crew members, Alexander Bastrykin, Chairman of the Russia's Investigative Committee, has set off for the crash scene. He is going to hold a briefing with an investigative team and representatives of all services involved in the investigation.

It should be noted that as soon as the investigation was launched, the Investigative Committee has been doing everything possible to find out all the circumstances and causes of the crash in order to identify and prosecute all those guilty of the tragedy.

The Investigative Committee will keep public updated on the investigation with maximum openness and transparency, considering interests of the investigation and regulations of criminal procedure.
